Disclosures and General Disclaimers

The values in this illustration are not guarantees or even estimates of the amounts you can expect from your real estate investments. Please review the entire Disclosures and General Disclaimers contained here and review the disclosures, descriptions, and additional information contained in the reports generated by this program.

While the information contained in this report is believed to be accurate, it is not guaranteed. The assumptions used in this analysis were provided by the client or by the client's other advisors. We provide investment analysis, and we do not claim local market knowledge. An active local real estate professional should be used for local market assumptions. Real estate investing is inherently risky and unpredictable. Some of the risks include reinvestment, interest rate, foreclosure, legal, political, expense, tenancy, vacancy, inflation/deflation, liability, casualty, pest, environmental, weather, earthquake, flood, and other risks. No investment analysis can consider or account for all risks. When projections of 5 to 30 years are made, small errors in assumptions result in large errors in the results which will cause the analysis to vary significantly from the actual investment performance. Though a specific project name and/or address may be shown in the report, no analysis can predict how a property will perform or what its investment performance will be. There are far too many uncontrollable factors which will influence the investment's actual performance. This site and its reports are provided for informational purposes only and should not be relied upon for tax, legal, investment, or transactional purposes. Neither Advanced Property Analysis (APA) nor DBS Consulting, Inc. (DBS) provides tax, accounting, real estate, or legal advice, and investors should discuss any tax, real estate, or legal matters with an appropriate professional. Neither APA nor DBS is a licensed real estate broker. A local market real estate professional is recommended for real estate transaction services.
